THE JOHN DEERE SPREADER

The Spreader with the Beater on the Axle

The main axle of the John Deere Spreader serves a two-fold purpose, that of an axle for the spreader and a shaft for the beater. All the strain and stress of spreading comes where it belongs, on the main axle, the strongest part of the machine, not on the spreader frame and box sides. The axle runs in self aligning boxes. It can not bind or get out of true. The draft is lightened and wear is reduced.

The box is wide and low—only 36 inches to the top of the box.

The load is carried on all four wheels.

The load is delivered near the ground, wind does not affect spreading.

High Drive Wheels lighten the draft and furnish extra traction.

Easy to load at back end, over the beater, if necessary.

Turns in its own length. Very easy on repairs.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

BELA NOYES, PIONEER OF NORWAY

(By Harry A. Packard)

Bela Noyes Jr. was the most powerful man who ever came into Norway. The aged inhabitants hereabouts who are able to remember him agree that out of that sturdy race of pioneers who reclaimed homes for the virgin wilderness in 1800, his size and strength were extraordinary.

He identified himself with the early history of Norway, in the days when the land was young—so long ago, in fact, that Mr. Winfield Cordwell (he himself now over eighty years of age), was but a boy when Bela Noyes, Jr., was an aged man. From Mr. Cordwell and others I have collected some of these stories of the powerful Bela Noyes, Jr., and his brother, Capt. John Noyes, also nearly as powerful, in order that they may be printed and thus form a record of Mr. Noyes.

If any of the readers of the Norway Advertiser know any more such stories or any genealogical history of the many descendants of Bela Noyes (the senior) whose children were, William, Sarah, Asa, James, Samuel, John, Bela, Jr., Mary, Levi, Betsy, Susan and Elizabeth—especially of the William Noyes tavern at Greenwood City, I would be very pleased if they would write to me: Harry A. Packard, Norway, Maine.

Bela Noyes, Jr., weighed over 250 pounds without a particle of fat—all flesh and muscle. In 1825, Mrs. George Horr (she then 81 years of age) described him as being "a very large man, large frame, large all-over."

His hands were as large as any ordinary two hands. His brother John, Captain Jack, was a big man but nothing like Bela. The nearest approach to Bela was Steven Sanborn. I quote Oscar Bennett on the comparison of the two men: "Bela and Sanborn never had any trouble; they never questioned each other's strength, but Bela was generally considered by far the more powerful of the two men."

And of all the men I have talked with I have never heard a man say that Bela ever made any unfair use of his great strength. He quite often was accorded his own way because of the celebrity of his strength but his heart was as tender as a woman's and he would go far out of his way to avoid an unnecessary quarrel. He loved children; they were his hobby, his delight.

When he shouted you could hear him a mile and the rafters of the house shook when he leaned back in his chair and laughed. He was a hard working man. 'Twas oft related how he could bury the blade of an axe to its very wedge in a frozen rock maple. Yet even the peeping frogs annoyed him more than the growl of a bear or the cry of an "Injun Devil," and he used to hire Eva Noyes and others of the small boys and girls of the neighborhood to catch the frogs in the marsh near his home at Noble's Corner, and carry them down to the meadow where they would not annoy his slumbers.

He seldom, if ever, used the words of the Deity as an adjective. When he wished to emphasize a thing his great word was "by sanko."

Bela Challenged

A couple of husky young men who had trimmed up all the fighting blood in the neighborhood decided that by their combined strength they could lick Bela Jr. The first time they met him they challenged him to fight.

"No, no boys," said Uncle Bela Jr. in a patronizing tone. "Run along and tend to your kitting and besides it is too warm to fight."

Still the boys insisted and with a combined effort started in to make an advance. Bela Jr. was quicker than they, however. His right arm shot out like a battering ram, encircled the neck of the nearest bully and drew him tightly against his chest. In the same instant the other adversary was drawn in and pinned by his other arm. Bela started down the street with a man under each arm. No gentle hold either; they were black in the face when he contemptuously cast them aside.

Told by Augustus Noyes

Augustus Noyes used to relate how Bela Jr. was working in the woods with his ox team when he came to a huge pine that had blown over. When the tree fell a large part of the roots came up with it and the great mass of roots with earth and soils embedded among them was turned up on edge. Bela seized an axe to cut the tree in order to make room to drive the cattle past. Unbeknown to him the cattle edged along to the upturned roots and began licking the earth from around the roots. When the tree fell, the roots, thus released, snapped back and the roots resumed their original position burying the heads of the cattle to their shoulders. Quick as a flash, Bela saw the predicament and hurried to the relief of his oxen. He seized the great yoke and with a mighty lunge pulled them from under the debris and set them back onto their haunches.

"By Sanko" and the Nova Scotia Roughnecks

In the early days cattle were the common beasts of burden in Maine and some especially fine ones were raised by the farmers living in the vicinity of Greenwood City. "Judge" Patch, who kept the tavern opposite that run by Billy Noyes at the City developed quite a business taking the surplus cattle the farmers wished to dispose of to Nova Scotia. Mr. Patch dealt only in good stock and his dealings with his provincial neighbors was fair and honest. He was welcomed with his fine cattle and they commanded a good price. His story does not record that Noyes ever tried one of these bovine ventures, but since he later went to Calais where he did an extensive business as cattle buyer it may well be imagined that he learned the rudiments of the business along with "Judge" Patch. Mr. Patch usually drove the cattle through himself, assisted by his son, George, and others of the young men of the community. Scodwick N. S. was the objective point of these cattle drives. The cattle were yoked together and driven over the rough country road and by continuous trails through the woods to Canada.

There was a small settlement just over the line which the cattlemen always used as a relay station. Here they had an opportunity to rest the cattle under cover, the first during the long overland journey from Norway. The men, too, had a chance to sleep in beds again and except for one thing, they were all exceedingly anxious to make the Tavern and enjoy the rest it afforded. Several of the rough necks of the settlement made the tavern their regular rendezvous, too. They were strong in number and strong in arms and the men from Maine made a special object of their main ways. They abused them shamefully, seeking provocation for a fight and when they found the men from the States were of a peaceful nature contented themselves by occupying all the seats in the tavern, jostling them about and in various ways making their stay miserable. The tavern keeper, fearful that he would lose the patronage of his Maine friends, remonstrated with the bullies but without avail.

Then "Judge" Patch had an inspiration. He winked a knowing eye and chuckled to himself. On the remainder of the trip to Scodwick he said nothing of his plans nor did he on the long tramp through the woods home, reveal himself.

But immediately they arrived at Greenwood City, he hunted up Bela Noyes Jr. and Steven Sanborn and related in detail all his woes to them. They listened attentively and then Patch outlined his plans.

Uncle Bela chuckled, smiled to himself all that day and while "Judge" Patch was arranging with his neighbors for the next consignment of cattle, Uncle Bela sat in his little cabin chuckling away to himself. Once in a while he would slap his leg with his great hand and then lean back in his chair and laugh heartily.

When "Judge" Patch lined up his cavalcade of cattle before the tavern next morning he had two extra yokes in the line. He made no comment but in a few minutes Uncle Bela, with good stick in hand, came briskly down to the road. Behind him was Steven Sanborn. Both took places in line, each driving a yoke of sturdy oxen. This was the first, last and only trip that Bela ever made on the overland trip to Canada and he went with a purpose this time.

The trip was made without accident or adventure until they arrived at the relay tavern just across the line. For once in his life "Judge" Patch approached the place without shivering. The little room at the front of the tavern was used for the purpose of office, lounging room and bar room. The bar, a small unpretentious affair, was on one side and beginning at the bar and following entirely around the room except where the door opened, a rough pine bench had been built entirely around the room. In the early evening "Judge" Patch led his cattlemen to the bar room for an evening smoke and a night cap of Medford rum.

Bela Noyes crowded into the corner where the bench began at the front of the bar and endeavored to make his great bulk look as inconspicuous as possible. He puffed a good deal and endeavored to make himself appear an overgrown man, infirm because of his great bulk.

When the roughnecks espied the Maine cattlemen they set up a howl of delight. One of the bullies jostled against "Judge" Patch and accidentally knocked his glass of rum from his hands. The biggest of the gang selected Bela as an object worthy of his special attention. He advanced to where Bela was sitting and wedged himself in between Bela and the bar. Bela accordingly moved over. Then the bully edged up close to Bela and Bela in turn edged over. In this manner the bully drove Bela around the room. When he came to the open space by the door Bela got up and walked across and sat down on the bench on the other side. The bully followed. He nudged and he pushed and made offensive remarks about down east Yankees and cattlemen especially. Bela puffed and between puffs haltingly answered the caustic questions, and taunts aimed at him.

"By Sanko," Bela cried, "ye have bully picked it up. 'By Sanko, Yank," he said sarcastically, "will you move over a little?" and Bela obligingly moved over.

Around the room they went again, Bela edging over and the bully having the time of his life. At the end of the line of benches Bela stopped. Fire glowed in his eyes. His shaking bulk suddenly hardened like stone. The bully realized too late he had made the mistake of his life.

"By Sanko," Bela cried, "you have crowded me too far! By Sanko!" and he seized him.

Like a plummet his great arm shot out. He seized the bully as a dog seizes a rat and shook him in much the same manner. Then he lifted him into the air, straightened him head first for the window and threw him head first through glass and sash out of the house.

Steven Sanborn had planted his huge bulk in the open doorway, a formidable barrier to the rest of the bullies. He had caught by the collar and seat of the trousers the first of those who sought to escape through the door and he stepped back from the window where he had thrown his tormenter he turned and Sanborn threw his captive across the room to Bela.

How Bela roared! This was fun for him; it was revenge in a righteous cause. There were no more windows to throw the ruffians through but one and all, with legs and arms flying, they were hurled through the opening in the wall, where the window had been.

"Bela was a big man and he could laugh loudly but he couldn't laugh," as he said to the bartender. The latter had more at stake. To Bela this was an incident; to the bartender it was a victorious culmination of a long series of heated up injuries.

They must all have a drink! Again and again the glasses were filled at the expense of the house. The bar man wanted to feel of Bela's great muscles; he wanted to talk about "dowp in Maine," and talk they did long into the night for the bar man was insistent of showing appreciation; they had performed a service for him, as well as avenging "Judge" Patch's long tolerated abuse.

UNCLE LEM'S SAYINGS

Mr. Curtis, the publisher of the Ladies Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post, and father-in-law of Edward W. Bok, has declared against the peace plan of his son-in-law. Wise old fellow. He knows that it cannot succeed.

A. U. S. Senate committee of which Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is chairman, is investigating the Bok peace plan propaganda. He thinks there is something under cover that needs exposing. We await developments.

It is said that over 10,000 voters have signed the primary papers of Senator Brewster for Governor. This is a big boost so early in the campaign, but can he keep up this pace till June? Strange things may happen in Maine this year. We have a faint recollection of what occurred in Greenback times. There is an increasing call for Governor Baxter to declare whom he favors.

Col. Hume has wisely declined to be a candidate in the primaries for U. S. Senator against Senator Bert M. Fernald. He saw the handwriting on the wall. The Colonel might be a formidable candidate for Governor in 1928.

It is said that one of the female teachers in the Norway schools is a confirmed cigarette smoker and that this pernicious habit is spreading among the young.

There must be some mistake about this for the school board and Sup. she would have undoubtedly promptly received her walking ticket. Uncle Lem.

Wm. Thibodeau is canvassing to obtain a large acreage for the corn factory. H. F. Webb has taken the factory to run provided enough corn is subscribed.

Wm. C. Leavitt has completed a useful kitchen utensil for cleaning and scraping sinks. It is made of tin and has a wooden handle.

Mrs. Emma Twitchell is very sick at her home at Oxford Park, threatened with pneumonia and her daughter, Mrs. Mae Austin, is caring for her.

Studebaker engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best. We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration. We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all chassis are alike.

Beauty—Luxury—Finish. The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it. The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velvet lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note how every detail denotes infinite care. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tires, a steel trunk, a courtesy light. These are rare extras, even on the costliest cars.

Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a mid-winter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 miles of average service, of 6,000 miles per year. What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value

These are the things to consider

THE cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some major costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive. Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our Department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 500,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebakers cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The best we know. Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best. We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration. We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all chassis are alike.

Beauty—Luxury—Finish. The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it. The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velvet lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note how every detail denotes infinite care. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tires, a steel trunk, a courtesy light. These are rare extras, even on the costliest cars.

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

Good Roads Cut Costs

We quote from the official organ of the Dairymen's League:"A farmer of the famous Aroostock potato-growing section of Maine, has 160 acres devoted to potatoes, seven and one-half miles from market, producing 24,000 barrels of potatoes a year, and found it impossible to deliver the potatoes in season.""On account of the road grade between farm and railroad, one team of horses could only haul 20 barrels of potatoes at a trip. It would have taken 1,200 working days with one team—just a little more than three years—to haul the potato crop to market. It would take twenty teams and twenty drivers to do the work in season, which would cost more than $6,000.""A motor truck was put to work and based on the old price of 25 cents a barrel for hauling the potatoes by horses,
this truck paid for itself the first season, hauling 24,000 barrels."This is not an advertisement of the motor truck. Any motor truck would do it, provided it had the road and no motor truck could do it unless it had a good road over which to travel.This is not an advertisement of potato farming. The same economy may be had with any produce, whether lettuce or grain, hay or onions, alfalfa or corn, if there is a good road over which to haul it. No crop no matter how profitable to raise, is as profitable to sell, if it has to be marketed over a poor road.This is an advertisement of the need of good roads!For if there has been no heavy road grade, which cut down horse hauling to the point where the price was prohibitive,
the motor truck, which could make it, could have made it at twice the speed or with double the load and half the cost.Mud stalls the horse. Grade cuts down his load. Mud stalls the truck.
Grade cuts down its speed. "Load"
and "speed," as used here, are both synonyms for "profit." Good roads, proper grades, quick, sure, heavy hauling at low cost—that's the answer to the farm and need of some way to make his business pay better.When the farmers of the United States unitedly say that they must have good roads everywhere, they will get them!

Is There a Mile Post in Your Town?

The Zero Milestone, located just behind the White House at Washington, on Meridian of Longitude Zero, dedicated to the Nation and accepted by President Harding, is the starting point for road measurement east, west, north, south of the Capital of the Nation.It is forty miles to Baltimore. It is also forty miles to Portland, Maine, depending on to part of Baltimore to which one measures! It may be twohundred and fifty-three or two hundred and sixty-seven miles to New York,
according as one measures to the Battery or somewhere up above Harlem!Every town in America ought to have a milestone, to which road distances
from other towns could be measured,
and from which distances could be computed. If an error of one mile was made in estimating distance between town and town across the continent, the motor traveler might easily be several hundred miles out of his calculations!A town milestone costs little. It can easily be financed by the local civic or commercial club. Its placement and use will foster civic pride, encourage tourist travel, and be an ever-lasting convenience to all who use it. A little research will compute its exact distance from the Zero Milestone at Washington, still further adding to its interest.From a commercial standpoint an official milestone would be of service in giving readers of advertisements of real-estate, for example, definite information.
A farm may be advertised as being six miles distant from Norway or South Paris. With the adoption of an official milestone, the reader would know that the distance is six miles from a fixed point which would be in the heart of the town.A good woman is too good for any

Norway and Vicinity

Celebrates Birthday

Isaac Abbott, Norway's oldest resident, celebrated his 91st birthday, Sunday, and although the day was passed quietly, Mr. Abbott was made happy with several remembrances, and entertained many callers during the day. He received post cards Saturday, reminding him the day was not forgotten by his friends. Mr. Abbott is a shut-in and for five years his room has been his world.

At that time he had been unable to work for a number of years from rheumatism, and he felt and broke his hip. Two years later, he had partially recovered, he fell again, which practically made him helpless. He is unusually well otherwise, and enjoys having callers and knowing what is "going on."

The daily paper is one of his pleasures. His faithful daughter reading the news. He enjoys "charking back" to the days of his boyhood, following along through the years as the many changes have taken place.

Mr. Abbott's native place was Hanover, near Howard Pond, where there was a little colony of seven families, known as Howard Gore. The family came to Norway more than 80 years ago, and settled below the falls. The father, Isaac Abbott, Sr., bought several acres of land, which he cleared and cut the timber with which to build a home for his family, and the rear of the present house is the original Abbott homestead. Isaac, who was the youngest in a family of 11 children, attended school at the Norway Liberal Institute. At the age of 15 he decided to leave the farm of a man, but the strenuous work proved too much for a growing lad and he was obliged to wait two years before completing the trade. "Tom" Poole remembered by the older residents of the town, was his teacher, and he taught him the real trick of plastering.

Mr. Abbott became an expert, and assisted in the construction of many of the buildings in the town, and the surrounding towns, also.

His real work commenced at Canton where he received $17 a month and his board. He remained only a short time there as he wanted to be at home. Later he went to Massachusetts with Mr. Poole for a short time. He married Clara Lamson of Boston and they returned to Norway to make their home. Mrs. Abbott passed away many years ago.

There are two daughters, Clara Louise, who has always lived at home, and since the death of her mother, has cared for her father in his invalidism, and Florence wife of Nathaniel Green of Otisfield Gore. A grandson, and wife are with them this winter, and a little great granddaughter brightens the place.

Mr. Abbott belongs to no orders and all his days are much the same. From boyhood Mr. Abbott was fond of horses and when in his teens became owner of his first driving horse. He enjoys recalling some of his trades. Nothing of a high stepper satisfied him. Mr. Abbott is a lover of the out-of-doors, and is hoping, when spring comes, he will be able to get to his door, at least. Perhaps a wheel chair may enable him to gratify this wish.

Mr. Abbott came into possession of the Boston Post came at this time as he is the oldest man, since the death of Emerson Kilgore, a few weeks ago.

An Ancient Record Book

Among the effects found in clearing out Cobble's Hall, was a record book of the "S. R. T. Society" of the Norway Liberal Institute. It contained the constitution signed by members with rules, etc. The penmanship is exceptionally good and spelling perfect.

The names of those who signed the constitution were:

B. H. Smart, Francis H. Stevens, O. N. Bradbury, Stephen A. Cordwell, I. Hanson, Darius Cobb, J. H. Bennett, Cyrus Cobb, J. H. Hobbie, R. Howe, Alvin Abbott, Martin Dale, L. H. Hobbie, A. L. Holden, J. N. Fuller, S. R. Parsons, J. A. Knight, Solomon Everett, B. E. Lawrence, John Woodman, Ben. Davis, Lewis A. Farrar, D. F. Noyes, Geo. E. Morrill, D. N. True, J. E. Bami, John W. Farrington, C. F. Brown, P. B. Snow, W. M. Danforth, C. G. Furlong, Wm. Wallace Mason, B. C. Greer, Spencer T. Bartlett, Horatio Bryant, Jas. H. Farrington, H. A. Hunsell.

First meeting was held Monday evening, Oct. 29, 1849, seventy-four years ago last October. Probably none are now living who took a part in it. Few indeed, who even remember the names of the above members. We wonder if the "C. F. Brown" who dashed off a careless, hold hand closing in a drawn-out scrawl is not that of "Artemus Ward."

This signature is not among the names of the organizers and with those who joined later. The meetings were held in the fifties. Artemus was about this time working with his brother, Cyrus Brown, who was then the editor and publisher of the Norway Advertiser.

Some of the important problems of the time were discussed viz:

Resolved: "That the Present Emigration to California Will Be Productive of More Good than Evil." Resolved: "That Whatever Is, Is Right." "That Capital Punishment Ought Not to Be Abolished." "That Foreigners Ought Not to Be Allowed the Right of Suffrage." "That All Games of Chance Ought to Be Prohibited." "That Railroads Are More Injurious than Beneficial to the People of the Country." "Through Which It Passes," "That Deception Is Not Justifiable," "That the Slanderer Is Worse than the Rum Seller," and many other debatable subjects.

We wonder if anyone now living remembers these debates? If so write us about them and the members of the society.

In the old record book is also the constitution of the "Knights of the Round Table" and the working ritual, by-laws and secret alphabet and a key to same.

This society was organized some years later than the debating society. No presumption is made in the year given. We presume it was in the early sixties. It was called the "Crimson Grove" of the Independent Order of the Grand Lodge of the State of Maine, and those signing it were:

Joseph Bennett, George E. Morrill, Fred E. Crockett, Edward C. Freeman, G. F. Whitehouse, Augustus N. French, Hiram Matthews, Daniel McIlwain.

No meetings are recorded but probably some were held and from this organization undoubtedly the Cobble's organization started in Dec. 1864 and had an existence as a social club to May 1923 when it disbanded.

The temporary engine house at the power station built after the fire there some three or four years ago is past usefulness as the roof has caved in.

Mooseheart Legion Notes

Women of the Mooseheart Legion, No. 379, were installed in a pleasing manner by Mrs. Cora Flood assisted by Mrs. Helen Damon. Officers were as follows: Past Regent—Mrs. Gertrude Brown. A buffet lunch was served and a social time followed.

For important reasons the time of the meetings has been changed to the second and fourth Tuesday in the month.

A vote was passed to hold a penny social at the next meeting on Feb. 12, with Mrs. Ida Everett and Mrs. Alice Blaquiere in charge. Members not solicited may bring refreshments of any kind.

American Legion Auxiliary

The American Legion Auxiliary held their regular meeting at Legion Hall, Wednesday evening, with a good attendance.

Committees for the coming year were appointed by president Hazel Conary as follows:

Flowers—Com. Harriet Knight, chairman; Edith Foss, Mrs. Lillian Blauvelt, Mrs. Music Com.—Irene Nevers, Elizabeth Klein. Publicity and Membership—Alice Fuller, chairman; Florence Blauvelt, Mrs. M. J. Ida F. Gurney, Irene Luck, Bertha Young, Alice Dyer, Almida Truman.

Dishes—Mabelle Shaw, chairman; Bertha Nevers, Edith Foss, Beulah Fletcher, Margaret Dyer, Marion Jellison.

After the meeting, a Penny Social was held and the Legion boys invited in. One of the features of the social hour was a spelling match, Legion vs. Auxiliary, which caused much merriment and proved very exciting. The Auxiliary came out on top, Alice Dyer winning first prize, a box of stationery, and Mrs. Nettie Nevers captured the gingerbread man.

Members of the Auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. Alice Fuller Wednesday evening, January 30, at 7:30 to set for the Hope Chest. Last week they met at Mrs. Bella Fletcher's home and a very pleasant and profitable evening was spent. Supper will be served at Legion Hall, February 13, at 7:30, by the Legion boys, who are famous for their ability as chefs.

Pie, Universal Dessert

Don C. Seitz, of the New York World, who was brought up at Norway, and ran a newspaper there, has decided for the "Nation," which has published a symposium on "The First American Dinner" that pie is the thing. He says that the perfect bill of fare in the fall or winter is baked beans, roast spare ribs, baked potatoes, biscuit and butter, pumpkin pie, apple pie, Indian pudding, tea; he adds. Indian pudding is a delicious compound of corn meal and molasses, served with cream.

Pie is the universal dessert and adorns most meals, including breakfast, not of a line running from Bellows Falls, Vt., to Portland, Me. For Friday, fish chowder is the dinner dish. It is best made from cunnors, a fish with firm, sweet flesh, frequenting the rock-bound bays of Maine. The chowder is embellished with round, "Boston crackers" split in half, pie, and coffee in large cups with milk, completes the repast. "Broiled scrod"—haddock or young cod cut across the grain—is a favorite breakfast dish. Codfish tongues with pork scraps is another. Salt codfish is an important item of food. Boiled with beets and served with pork scraps (cubes of salt pork fried brown) it is considered delectable. If any is left over, it can be chopped fine and "het up" for breakfast as "red flannel hash."

Doughnuts and coffee go with every breakfast, as well as pie.

For a supper, ginger cookies and tea serve. The pie allowance for a well-regulated Maine family of five is twenty-one per week.

Past Noble Grands Meet

The annual meeting of the Mt. Hope Past Noble Grands Association was held Wednesday evening at I. O. O. F. Hall. Preceding the business meeting, a delicious banquet was served by the House Committee, Maude DeCoster, Gertrude Hosmer and Harriet Brown. The meeting was called to order by the President, Linnie Bartlett, and the annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read. The following officers were elected for the coming year:

Pres.—Gertrude Hosmer. Vice Pres.—Dora A. Brett. Sec.—Harriet Brown.

Treas.—Alice Danforth. These were installed by the Marshal, Eva M. Kimball, in her usual pleasing manner.

One candidate was initiated and the ceremony was very impressive. Nora P. Bradbury acting as Herald and Eva M. Kimball as Conductor. Considerable business was transacted and interesting remarks were made by Lilla Rice, Laura Brown, Dora A. Brett and Eva M. Kimball. A social hour followed. Committee for the year are:

House Com.—Linnie Bartlett, Estela Carroll, Grace Bartlett. Entertainment—Harriet Brown, Dora A. Brett, Eva Kimball.

Suit Against Bristol's Music Studio

Prof. Frederick E. Bristol, well known in Norway as a frequent guest of his son, Jack Bristol, has appeared in the Supreme Judicial Court at Portland. He was there to defend his rights in an action brought by the plaintiff, Mrs. Mildred E. Melosh against the Bristol Music Studio in Harrison.

The plaintiff resides in Jersey City with a summer home in Harrison. She alleged the piano is a nuisance because of irritating "noises" produced by vocal pupils of the noted teacher. She further alleges the "series of noises increasing and decreasing in volume, after appearing to be shrieks and screams from a succession of voices" have proved detrimental to her health. The sum of $20,000 was the amount asked for as damages.

The plaintiff's testimony, together with a number of witnesses out of the state, was in the form of depositions. This testimony corroborated the statements set forth by Mrs. Melosh.

The studio was built in 1922 as a memorial to Prof. Bristol's contribution to music. Funds were provided by many prominent summer guests and former pupils of Prof. Bristol. Charles Harrison, the noted tenor, was active in the movement. In this building the aged teacher instructed pupils who have come under the ban and their vocal exercises being mainly responsible for the charges named.

A verdict was returned in favor of Prof. Bristol.

Shaw's dance at Norway Grange Hall as usual Saturday evening.

George Harriett of Westbrook is in town visiting friends for a few days.

Geo. H. Edwards has been the first of the week but has recovered and again is at his work at the paint shop.

M. W. Snyder of Boston was a week end guest of Lawrence M. Carroll. He is of the firm of H. S. & M. W. Snyder, wholesale leather dealers of that city.

The shoe manufacturers here "buy a good deal of 'kid' from them. It is reported that they are refusing to give more than 10 cents for the refuse of 100 pounds of their business. That looks to Weymouth Club members like a heap of money.

Harry Greenleaf and son, George, with Clarence Downing and Walter Morgan, got 19 pickerel from Upper Stone Pond near Lake Virginia in Stoneham.

A word of good size.

Shortie Cook: "I tell you it is some more than a bird." "I saw a bird eat a cat at the Gorman Fair last fall to get a suspended sentence to the State Reform School during their minority. It was laying it on heavy! That is what they got. The case was tried in Portland last week. I was there as a witness. It cost me more than a bird."

John Hazelton of Portland was in town Tuesday calling on friends. He did not prompt at the Freeman's Ball. John would really like to return and live in Norway. He is on the retired employees list of the Portland Railroad Company and they could send their check here as well as to him at Woodford's. "The girls are working in the city and want to live at home." Hence he is to remain there.

Guy Harriman manager of the Norway Athletic Club basketballers, has booked the South Paris Clerks' Quintet for a battle at Norway Opera House, Friday evening, Feb. 1.

PART OF AN EDUCATION

A critic of the public schools in a down state town found fault recently on the ground that the children had to spend considerable time learning about old King Tut. Many people who are strong on practical education, and who, in such schools, would also feel that the modern young people should waste no time on one so long dead as old Tut.

This raises a big question. If it is waste of time to have the children learn about King Tut, it would also be foolish to spend their energy on any point of ancient history. Many other subjects now in the school systems would have to be thrown out as impractical.

But if you let a boy just study arithmetic and English and bookkeeping and subjects that he can use in an ordinary job, you have done little to stimulate his general intelligence. His mind is likely to revolve in a narrow groove throughout his life.

To turn out intelligent men and women, one must go outside the circle of daily life, and give them ideas about the history of the world, development of science, the way men have lived in other countries and ages.

King Tut would seem to be a good point to begin on if you want to wake up a young person's mind. The King Tut discoveries are some of the most wonderful finds ever made in the history of exploration.

They should set people to thinking and suggest that their own little circle of life is only a tiny dot in the vast story of evolution. There is a fascination in looking so far back in the dawn of history. A boy or girl who gets interested in such a subject is likely to be invited thereby to go to study other things connected with human development, and in time to get an intelligent idea of human progress. Subjects like the King Tut discoveries should be useful in waking up American young people to a broader view of life.

The sinner is in no hurry to collect his wages.

MENTAL BACKGROUNDS

The words "mental backgrounds," those hinterlands of the soul made up from the full mental life and from the wide range of the sweet and free spirit, fill the mind with rich thoughts of the possibilities of continued growth. Here, if anywhere, must be found the reason and the substance of immortality. Here we see the naked soul, something that may put off the flesh which is, in comparison, but the unsubstantial pageant.

Mental backgrounds are well illustrated in the rich life of Katherine Mansfield, who died recently, but who has left us a rich legacy in her Journal now appearing in the Yale Review. Speaking of one of these hinterlands of her own mind, she says:

"I was thinking yesterday of my wasted, wasted early girlhood. My college life which is such a vivid and detailed memory in my dream, has now become a book or lecture. I lived in the girls, the professors, the big lofty buildings, the leaping fires in winter and the abundant flowers in summer. The views out of the windows, all the pattern that was weaving. Nobody saw it. I felt, as I did. My mind was just like a squirrel. I gathered and gathered and hid away, for that long 'winter' when I should re-discover all this treasure—and if anybody came close I settled up the tallest, darkest tree and hid in the branches."

But this girlhood was far from wasted. The rich, perceptive mind, like a busy hive, was storing up its abundant honey. What she has left us may be small in bulk, but it is rich in value.

Too largely in this age we are engaged in standardizing—standardizing education, as well as other things. The student has finished his four years course in the university and closes his books perhaps with a sigh of relief. He has merely started. He now has, or should have, the lines in his hands, should know the roads he may travel. Commencement is really a commencement, a beginning of the possible growth of life. In this standardizing of life and education, Agnes Repplier, in a recent essay, complains that "we have evolved a magazine-made universe, unfamiliar to the eyes of the earth dweller, and unrelated to his soul." Too many of the perfections of today "walk a chalked path, shunning facts, ignoring issues," "triumphantly pre-sending a non-existing world to unobservant readers."

It is an old saw that education never stops. We may perhaps baffle the true education, the storing of the rich mental backgrounds of the soul, by careless neglect or by the cheerful toleration of unworthiness, but the possibility of growth is always there. Sooner or later the mind awakens to it. It grows, or should grow, "to the end of the chapter."

The distant borders of the mental backgrounds are pushed farther and farther back, and the boundaries are pushed farther and farther ahead of us, and the mind ranges, discovers, settles, civilizes and builds.

This Continent of Mansoul grows and widens to the very end. What does the fact imply? The complete destruction and wastage of all these acquired values at the end of this chapter, or the storage of material for foundation stones for use elsewhere?

Yes, it is worth acquiring—this wide and rich mental background—for the happiness and pure joy of living, regardless of how long that living may be—a matter of a few days, or an eternity. (Minneapolis Journal.)

MY OLD FARM HOME

There's naught of the present its seasons or places,
Makes my heart to respond to my pulses warm thrill,
Like the sweet recollection of scenes and of
That in memory linger 'round Old Cobble Hill.

There's a little red farm house that stands on the hill side,
Where roses and grapevine shadow window and door,
The orchard, where blossoms make fragrant the breeze,
For bird and for bee in those sweet days of yore.

On green, sunny slopes, the sleek knee are fed—
Lungs gambol and frolic on hillside and plain,
On dashing wing the swallow is speeding,
Over fields where billows the ripe golden grain.

Where the sun from the East bursts forth in his glory,
With sunshine and shadows the valley to fill,
With sides all rock-ribbed and crest grim and hoary,
Like sentinel on guard stands Old Cobble Hill.

Here, homes of dear friends I've clustered around me,
In the far distant West the White Mountains
While nearer lie hillsides rich hued like the rainbow
And arched over all is the fairest of skies.

Here, love and contentment join hands in the morning,
And follow my footsteps through toll of the day,
Bringing zest to each pleasure and balm to each sorrow,
And hope for the future so far, far away.

But dearer than cottage or rainbow hued hill side
Are friends that I knew in days that are gone,
Who gather at evening around the warm hearthside,
And fill the old home with mirth and with song.

Those dear friends, alas! they long have been scattered,
Some go to the East, others seek the far West,
While many, ah many, have crossed the dark waters
And now sing their songs in the home of the "blest."

The dear old home, it now sleeps in ashes;
The fires on its hearthstone have long ceased to burn;
The days of youth, they too have departed,
Yes, long since departed to never return.
—S. B. J., South Paris.

INSURE YOUR MILK WITH PLENTY OF ICE

As the colder weather approaches, dairymen are making plans for the harvesting and storing of their ice crop. Thousands of dollars are lost annually because of failure to have a sufficient supply of ice on hand during the warmer months. The losses occur because the milk or cream is returned to the farmers or is manufactured into a poorer grade of manufactured products, which mean lower prices.

In the past twenty years sickness has decreased rapidly in the adult but not so fast in the infant or child. To the latter milk is the most essential food. When it is realized that these individuals are very susceptible to digestive troubles from any but fresh milk and that these troubles often result in death, is it any wonder that the public will be more particular concerning the conditions under which this essential food is produced and handled?

Cooling milk and cream on the farm promptly and properly would prevent, to a large extent, the enormous waste which occurs every year. It is difficult to accomplish this without the use of plenty of ice. Milk comes from healthy cows contains but few bacteria, but others enter the milk as it is handled. These bacteria multiply in warm milk thereby causing souring and undesirable fermentation. A temperature of 60 degrees or higher assists in the souring process, consequently it is necessary that the milk be kept below that temperature, and preferably below 50 degrees.

A popular method of cooling milk is by the use of a spring or of a tank of cold water in which ice is kept. Spring water is seldom as cold as it is thought to be, and spring tanks are not kept "as cold as ice," frequently have a temperature as high as 65 degrees Fahrenheit. An accurate thermometer is essential, therefore, to determine the temperature of water for cooling milk. Considerable bacteria, however, develops before milk becomes thoroughly cooled by this method. An improvement over this is by the use of a cooler in which ice is kept and over which milk flows. The fact that pre-cooling with a surface cooler is not practiced and that ice is not put into a cooling tank until after the milk is put there is the cause that much milk, reaching the shipping station or the consumer in summer, soon sours.

To cool milk by use of the pre-cooler and the tank will require about four tons of ice per cow, allowing for shrinkage. In storing ice the most essential features are good drainage and plenty of ventilation above the ice. Allow 45 cubic feet per ton for ice storage, for example; a building 20'x15'x10' will store 60 tons of ice and will allow for the required amount of sawdust around the sides. By taking these precautions the milk supply will be insured against loss during the coming season. Why work hard to produce milk and then lose all the profit by not having a sufficient amount of ice?

Myths Are History.

Mythology, or the study of the beliefs of ancient peoples, is a fascinating study. Myths do not just happen to be. There were no story writers in olden times who said, "I must write a popular story," and forthwith a story appeared that lived and went from mouth to mouth for thousands of years. A myth, in its last analysis, is an historic account, every detail of which is based on fact.

The tales of Homer were thought to be poetic fiction until the burned ruins of Troy were uncovered. The story of Theseus slaying the Minotaur is no idle creation, for every detail of it—the Athenian children for the sacrifice, the labyrinth palace, the wild bull in the center, and a host of other details—has been abundantly verified as fact.

THE DRIVER WHO DRINKS—A MAN WITHOUT FEAR

"The killings and accidents caused by drunken drivers do not happen only or most frequently during total drunkenness," says the A. L. A. "for when they reach this condition they are more or less helpless. The question arises, then, at what particular point does any man cease to be sober and begin to be drunk? The chief power by which we retain our manhood is the power of will, of clean thought, of sane decisions, and this power is the first stronghold to be attacked by liquor.

"With a man at the wheel of a moving automobile it is, therefore, not a question of whether he staggers much or little from it does, it seems quite reasonable to believe that with even one drink a man is unfit to be upon the highways driving a car. Not that he, himself, would be particularly noticeable or objectionable away from his car; but the fact that this powerful and destructive force is in his charge, makes him a decidedly dangerous menace to himself and to every other person using the highway, and judges dealing with these cases should recognize this fact.

"The automobile driver who drinks even moderately," declares the A. L. A.,
"is a man without fear of consequences," nor does he recognize or care for the element of danger, nor the laws of the Commonwealth. When in this condition life is a thing of small concern to him,
and death a fleeting shadow that falls across his path with less of thought than the passing of a cloud in the blue above.

"If you drive a car you do not care
to meet him on the highways; if you walk,
the danger to yourself is fully as great.
Wherever he goes he carries with him
the evil of irresponsibility.

"Pictured at his worst, how many
and deep the scars seared upon the love of wife and children when he thus de-bauches the affections of those he has solely sworn to protect. The old mother, whose boy he still is and for whom she toiled and dreamed and cherished such hopes as only mothers may, sifts through her thin hands the ashes of her burned ambition, while she pleads in trembling voice against his downward course.

"The sacredness of home ties have no influence upon him, if he seizes the well meant advice of friends, if he shakes from his shoulders the hands of those who still believe in him, as he mounts to the sat of his engine of destruction, determined to show the world his defiance of the law, what guarantee," asks the A. L. A.,
"has the general public that he will treat it with consideration?"

"The man who drives a motor car over our roadways while under the influence of liquor, no matter how little, is no longer a father, husband or son. He has severed his ties with decent social life and placed himself outside the honor roll of man. He may escape detection for a moment. He may wallow in the filth of his voluntary disease and crush the love and respect of family and friends but he cannot escape the consequences of his depravity. Retribution is the immutable law of the universe.

"Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin believes that for a first offense a convicted drunken driver should not be jailed but pay a fine of not less than $100;
and if he has an accident while under the influence of liquor should receive a jail sentence. How will a law such as this work out?"

"Out of the thousands of drunken drivers convicted in Massachusetts Courts
the past year, how many have had accidents? The jail sentences under such a law would be few and far between, for it is not contended that every offender causes an accident," declares the A. L. A., "but there is no reason why the public should submit to this added unlawful menace being imposed upon it, since the ordinary risks are already great and growing more so.

"It may be a jail sentence will not materially deter these offenders at first but if they are caught with a jail sentence, law only, in fact, there will be three months or more that they will be forcibly excluded from our highways.
That will mean something to the public,
and more to the offender.

"In Iowa a jail sentence for the first offense has recently become a law. On December 8 at Des Moines a drunken truck driver was before Judge Bonner
who, in imposing a year's sentence said:
'You might as well have run down the street with a loaded shot gun firing in all directions.' Will this truck driver dare the law a second time? Will not such a sentence create a panic among drunken drivers in general? The drunken driver is a national menace. Many of the States have passed laws meting
out severe penalties.

"It is to be presumed that as many drunken drivers are operating cars upon the highways of other States as in Massachusetts and that the officers have been as keen in arresting them—but what a difference in the stories told where fines mostly prevail and where jail sentences are the custom.

"Every applicant for a license to drive
and every person asking for a renewal should swear to the fact whether or not he is a user of liquor; and if the answer is no and this person is thereafter caught operating a car while drunk or to any extent under the influence of liquor,
he should not only be prosecuted for that offense but also for perjury if it can be shown that he was a liquor user previous to taking the oath, and a law, if necessary, should be enacted making his registration card prima facie evidence of the fact.

"The conviction of thousands of drunken drivers the past year warrants such action. The way to squelch the crimes of drunken drivers is to prevent them getting a start, and then if someone does get a start, to play the full force of the law upon them. Most men, even hardened drinkers, will pause before bathing the trap that eventually will be sprung upon them."

Visit to Bethel Grange

Thursday, Jan. 17, was a gala day for Round Mountain Grange, when twenty-two of their members accepted the invitation of Bethel Grange to spend the day with them and have their officers installed jointly with those of Bethel Grange which was done by State Master
Abbott in such an impressive manner that the new officers could not but feel an inspiration to do the work assigned them with enthusiasm and faithfulness.

The third and fourth degrees were worked by Pleasant Valley Grange in a beautiful and dignified manner. The Lecturer, Mrs. Berry, presented a very interesting program which was enjoyed by all. One of the features we certainly have not forgotten is the bounteous dinner which the sisters of Bethel Grange the nated for serving. Even old Winter united with our Brothers and Sisters and gave us such a bright and sunny day that it would rival a day in June, the traveling so good that the sleigh bells jingled a merry tune as homeward bound we neared old Round Mountain, we felt that we had gained the memory of a happy day, courage and inspiration to cherish the noble precepts of our order.

Round Mt. Grange Round Mountain Grange met at their hall Saturday, Jan. 19, at regular session.
Those of the officers who were not at Bethel were installed by Brother W. B.
Cummings. Officers all present except Flora. After the usual business the following program was presented: A reading by Mrs. Bruce. Each member offered their resolution for Grange work the coming year, and nearly every member responded heartily in the resolve to make the meetings more interesting and the Grange more prosperous. Reminis-cences of the Grange members of "ye olden times" by Brothers James Kimball and Irving Beckler and Sister Dora Beckler and reading by Mrs. Ella Cummings.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan. — "My troubles

were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down

pains in my right

side, also headaches

and sleepless nights.

I first began having troubles when I was

15; and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read
what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done
for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation
was the only thing that would help me,
but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer
the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."

Mrs. GUS VOGL, 6608 Pelouze Street,
Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

OXFORD COUNTY WOMEN SAVED

With an estimated saving of nearly $2,000, the women of Oxford County ranked second in work done in clothing during the past year, Twin County being first with slightly more than $2,000.

Millinery was the most popular branch of the work and in this the women of Oxford County excelled all others in the state. Two hundred and fifty hats were worked upon, either remodeled or made new, at an estimated saving of more than $1,000. This was both the greatest saving and the largest amount of hats recorded in any county in the state during the past year. In addition to the monetary saving, the women were given instruction in the renovation of material and in the selection, making and trimming of hats that were becoming to themselves and showed good taste and workmanship.

In the work of clothing construction, Oxford County also led the list although the results could not be measured in tangible form. However, this was by far the most important branch of the work, the nucleus around which all other clothing work centers. It included lectures and demonstrations in healthful corseting, selection of textiles and clothing, care of garments, construction and remodeling of garments and dress finishes.

Seventy-nine dress forms were made at an estimated saving of more than $675, while 133 foundation patterns were made at an estimated saving of more than $120. This latter work included petticoat patterns drafted from individual measurements, waist patterns and dress patterns. The last mentioned was taken up for the first time in Oxford County and met with the hearty approval of all women, because of its easy construction and its general adaptability to various types of figures.

The dress forms made offered an opportunity for self-fitting and the construction of garments without alteration. Further work will be done by the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture along these lines in 1924 with the added project of fabrics. The purpose of this new work will be to teach the selection and buying of appropriate household and clothing material.

Another
Reason Why—

The Buick Third Member

Buick cars drive through a third member, not the springs. The springs only support the body and assure easy riding. A Buick rear spring accidentally broken cannot misalign the axle and prevent driving the car. The Buick axle remains in fixed position. Consequently the adjustment of Buick four-wheel brakes is not affected by the deflection of the springs.

TWO PUREBRED HOLSTEINS

Two purebred Holstein cows in the herd of Joseph Robinson of Oxford, recently completed extraordinary records for the production of butter, according to the records of advanced registry office of The Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Pequitside Sadie Vale Daisy, a three year old, produced in seven consecutive days 582.5 pounds milk containing 23.981 pounds butterfat equal to 22.99 pounds butter and in 30 days she produced 2394.7 pounds milk containing 98.046 pounds butterfat equal to 122.55 pounds butter.

Pequitside Sadie Vale Alice, also a three year old, produced in seven consecutive days 479.1 pounds milk containing 17.645 pounds butterfat equal to 22.05 pounds butter.

The advanced registry system of the National Holstein Association was started 38 years ago and has constantly grown in importance. This system is absolutely essential to successful breeding operations in purebreds and is proving the main factor in increasing the productive capacity of all dairy cows.
